Solomon Nightshade is hot on the trail of a fiend with a machine gun. He knows where he can go to find him, but the streets are so full of danger that he might come back unwounded. It's time for Nightshade to be a superhero! He can control people, machines, and all manner of things with his hands. And if he sees something that shouldn't be there, he can blow it up. And if he fights supervillains, he can freeze them in ice or break them over his knee. He's got all kinds of gadgets, including a specially-designed gun and super teleportation. He's afraid to call in for help, because if his secret identity is known, he won't have a job and he won't be able to stop criminals any more. But don't worry. He'll need a team to help him. He is Nightshade, crime fighter. And the coolest crime fighter in town is you. † All copyright is a property of their respective owners and authors. More particularly, the present disclosure is related to compositions and methods for enhancing the clearance of lacrimal fluid (or "tears") and the treatment of ocular diseases and conditions. The human tear film functions to provide an overlying layer of hydration over the various surfaces of the eye, including the cornea and conjunctiva. In addition, the tear film serves as a lubricant between the eye's tissues and protects the exposed surfaces of the eye from damage. When the supply of tears is inadequate to meet the demands of normal ocular function, however, dry-eye related disorders may develop. Dry eye is characterized by a decrease in tear production or an impairment in tear film turnover. Tear film turnover is determined by the flow of tears from the precorneal tear film through the lacrimal drainage system and out of the eye. Many disease states, injuries and aging can decrease tear production and increase tear film evaporation and the risk of dry eye. Therapeutic approaches to managing dry eye have generally been directed to replenishing the tear film. Ocular dryness can originate in one or more of the ocular surface epithelia such as the cornea or conjunctiva,

On the Road Again......Along with the Sawdust 1) The to-do list is always growing and having the CB really helps me get the last of it done before leaving. 2) It's my fault that some things didn't get done during the week because I didn't stay on top of it. When I get home I go through my to-do lists and try to get things checked off. 3) If I need to make a special trip to Target to get something, I call before I leave. 4) If I remember something special I want to do after I get home, like plant a herb garden or work on my preserves, I call ahead. 5) I also set myself a check in time for myself after I leave. I have a combo of a city and country time zone so I leave for home and don't check my email until the following day noon central. 6) I always have my phone with me. (Yay, too, for the digital checklist!) 7) Having these precious moments to make as much time as I can to get things done or time to spend with my family is priceless. It is a few minutes here or there but when I have too much stuff that has to be done (like turning the compost

Open Encore is the debut album of South Korean rapper Miss A and Big Bang's Taeyang. It was released on February 26, 2014, in South Korea. The album includes 16 tracks with 2 different versions of "Shy Boy" being released in 3 different editions. The title track is based on the infamous storyline of Kurosawa's famed Samurai film, Seven Samurai. The album's theme is sung using several Korean vocal units: The Twins, Big Bang's Daesung and Taeyang, and Miss A. On November 19, 2013, it was announced that Big Bang member T.O.P had signed a contract to release his second solo album, so the albums of Taeyang and Daesung were put on hold for a while. However, on February 24, 2014, Big Bang's agency YG Entertainment finally released the members' solo albums. For the first time in South Korea, Big Bang made a public performance on MBC's music show "Music Core." The two member's album is titled Open Encore. As Big Bang was preparing for the solo albums, there was a high possibility that Taeyang and Daesung's albums would be delayed. On November 19, 2013, Big Bang's agency YG Entertainment had mentioned that T.O.P had signed a contract to release his second solo album. Although the contract was revealed, the exact day of the album release was still not confirmed. When Taeyang released his solo album, T.O.P's album was also released. As a result, the albums of Taeyang and Daesung were put on hold for a while. The rumor made Big Bang's fan furious. Fans complained that Big Bang were leaving Taeyang and Daesung. On February 24, 2014, the agency YG Entertainment finally released the two member's solo albums. Although Big Bang still did not release the exact date, YG Entertainment mentioned that Big Bang had already made the preparation for their upcoming songs. The announcement of Big Bang's and Big Hit Entertainment's debut album 'LOL' was revealed in 2013. On March 27, 2013, the album's title track 'Fxxk It' featuring Im Si Wan, the vocal unit of Blackpink, was released. On November 26, Big Bang made their comeback stage
